Many Regrets

If Saddam Hussein is still in power in Iraq five years from now, how likely is it that he will again pose a military threat to the region?

- Not at all likely: 7%
- Not too likely: 13%
- Somewhat likely: 26%
- Very likely: 52%

Do you feel that the US and its allies should have continued fighting until Saddam Hussein was removed from power, or not?

Repeat Offender

Question:
As you may know, Saddam Hussein has been preventing UN helicopters from inspecting nuclear weapons and chemical weapons facilities in Iraq. Such inspections are provided for in the cease-fire resolution ending the war. Do you favor or oppose using US military planes to force Saddam Hussein to allow UN inspections of Iraqi nuclear weapons and chemical facilities?

Questions:
Do you think the United States should use military force against Iraq?

1997
Yes 76%

Do you think the United States should use force against Iraq even if US allies do not support use of military force?

1997
Yes 50%

Note: Asked of registered voters.

Question:
While the crisis is over concerning the weapons inspectors in Iraq, do you feel Saddam Hussein will comply with the United Nations arms control policies in the future, or will he eventually take actions that violate United Nations arms control policies and lead to another crisis?

Question:
...If Iraq continues to refuse to allow the UN weapons inspection team access to these sites, do you think that the UN should vote to use military force against Iraq, or should it continue to use economic and diplomatic pressure against Iraq?

Question:
Do you think getting Saddam Hussein to comply with United Nations weapons inspectors is worth the potential loss of American life and the other costs of attacking Iraq, or not?

Question:
Do you think the military actions [air strikes on missile sites in Iraq by the United States and its allies because of Saddam Hussein’s continued violation of the United Nations cease-fire rules] that have been taken against Iraq so far this week have been too tough, not tough enough or just about right?
